

Chris McNulty

Dance Delicioso

Chris McNulty is a vocal legend who has been astounding and moving audiences since her emergence on the international jazz scene in 1985. Her risk-taking, fluid, and strongly emotional approach never fails to connect with the audience. With a touch of Sarah, a hint of Ella, and a whole lot of vibe, McNulty is blessed with an exquisite instrument and a natural sense of swing. Her unique approach lends itself to just about any musical style she chooses to tackle.

On her new and 5th release Dance Delicioso, Chris McNulty has done it again. A joyful dance, the music flows like a river, taking the listener along for a ride through sonic storytelling at its best. Dance Delicioso stays in the mind and begs for repeated listening. Featuring jazz luminaries Mulgrew Miller on piano, Gary Bartz and Gary Thomas on saxophones, Billy Hart on drums, Ugonna Okegwo on bass, and Paul Bollenback on guitars among others.

McNulty's alluring title track "Dance Delicioso" crosses over between storytelling, world music sensibility and top notch jazz improvisation. Her poignant portrayals of her original "Last Farewell" and the Irish folk ballad "He Moves Through The Fair" are delicately woven among jump-for-joy versions of the classic standards "All of You" and "Star Eyes". The truly trance-like "Meaning of the Blues" serves as the thread to round out this remarkable listening experience.

Truly a jazz recording for the new millennium, Dance Delicioso is scheduled for release July 12th 2005.
